

But in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men. -

Matthew 15:9

invaindotheyworshipme.com

Can We Fathom the Unfathomable?

Sorry everyone, but no words of semi-wisdom or sarcasm tonight. I have a headache that hurts as bad as a migraine but doesn't have the symptoms of a migraine. I had the beginnings of a sore throat a couple days ago and began taking zinc to try to counteract it. The zinc arrested the sore throat but I came down with a tremendous headache. The season of puniness is upon us.

So, that is my lame excuse for not writing something tonight. I just can't think well right now.

I'm needing to write a short article for children that is describing God's love. The task is mind-boggling! How do you describe something that is beyond understanding? When I was a kid I learned by accident how to look into infinity. It's an easy thing to do and I'm thinking that I'll tell the kids how to do that. After they have seen something that has no end then I'll tell them that when they reach the end of infinity God's love continues on beyond that. But then, infinity doesn't have an end. Will kids be able to understand that? Do I understand that? Not really.

And since my thoughts are on God's love I want to share those thoughts with you but like I said my head is too painful for me to think clearly. It's 1:40 a.m. The lights in this room are off and the monitor is dimmed. Noises are turned off. (Maybe this is a migraine after all?) Since I'm not able to think right now I'm going to share a link that I may have shared before. Dr. Greg Boyd gives the best presentation of God's love that I've ever heard. I've listened to this sermon several times and it still brings tears to my eyes. It sounded like even Greg cried a bit when he preached it.

Dr. Boyd did a whole series on God's love then when it was finished he followed it up with another series on God's love. One series alone wasn't enough to cover the subject. Two series weren't enough either but he moved on from there. If you have the inclination to listen to something then I recommend both those series. Here's your link for "The Prodigal God" <https://whchurch.org/sermon/prodigal-god/>

May your Sabbath be filled with God's presence. May your every day be filled with God's presence.

Much love,

Hannah